With funds received through United Way of America and others, local United Ways in Florida have played a key role in the long-term recovery of individuals and families in their respective communities. Additionally, United Way of Florida has hired a statewide long term recovery coordinator who represents us at national and statewide recovery tables, in order to better assist local members in finding resources, developing appropriate partnerships, and understanding the recovery process.

The statewide recovery coordinator works on behalf of every local Florida member. If your staff or volunteers need up to date information, expertise or assistance with regard to disaster recovery in your community, please contact:

Welcome to the Florida Association of Volunteer Centers (FAVC)! FAVC is a vital association that provides a network of support and professional development to the leaders of Florida's Volunteer Centers. Through quarterly meetings, FAVC members discuss new opportunities for volunteers, professional development and grant opportunities for volunteer leaders, as well as share best practices to ensure that Florida's volunteers have the best possible volunteer experience.

Volunteer Centers are the doorway to volunteering. Through FAVC, Volunteer Centers can continue to provide rewarding experiences for people of all ages who want to volunteer in their local communities.

History of the Florida Association of Volunteer Centers (FAVC):

The Florida Association of Volunteer Centers, Inc. (FAVC) was formed in July 1983, and the Articles of Incorporation were filed with the Florida Secretary of State on November 29, 1983. The first president was Judy Merritt from Volunteer Pensacola. There were 12 original members of the board of directors representing Centers from the following communities: Ft. Lauderdale, St. Petersburg, Jacksonville, Gainesville, Ocala, Pensacola, Daytona Beach, Tallahassee, Cape Coral, Sarasota, Orlando and Tampa.

The purpose of the organization, as stated in the Articles, was:

To strengthen and increase the growth of volunteerism in Florida
To provide a network of support and professional development among directors of Volunteer Centers in Florida
To conduct educational training programs
To dispense all funds exclusively for charitable or educational purposes

The formation of FAVC some 25 years ago was visionary on the part of those 12 directors. As a result of our long history and strong membership, we have one of the strongest state associations in the country. The names of the players may have changed over time, but the dedication toward volunteerism in the state of Florida has remained a constant.
