VULNERABILITY –

VOLCANIC –
In Marion and Linn Counties, additional debris could result from lahars caused by an eruption of Mount Jefferson. Lahars are a mixture of water and rock fragments that flow down the slope of a volcano, usually along a stream channel. Lahars can be generated by volcanic activity, prolonged rain, or any other weather conditions that result in rapid snow melt (Goettel 2006). Refer to the County–Specific Annexes for Marion and Linn Counties for potential volcanic debris issues.
