"Noelani Ahia, a Kānaka Maoli activist, longtime organizer in Lahaina Town. She's also the co–founder of the organization Mauna Medic Healers Hui and is involved in mutual aid efforts as the community responds to the devastation.

We've got medics, food distribution. We're working on organizing housing for people.

So we're finding some unique ways to get resources to people. Folks have been taking boats around from the other side of the island in order to get resources in. And we've been using whatever methods we can to get the needs of the people met. But it's a beautiful effort. The people on the ground are so strong and so resilient and so ready to jump in to help one another. We say, "Aloha kekahi i kekahi." That means "Love going out, love coming back." And one of my good friends said today, "Your disaster emergency kit must include community." Community is first. And that's really what it's about, is taking care of each other."

Lāhainā, Maui. August 18, 2023 – Nā ʻOhana o Lele, a coalition of community members in Lāhainā, today called on Governor Josh Green to meet three demands for the recovery of the community.

The demands are:

Give our Lāhainā community time to grieve. The fire occurred only 10 days ago, and many people are still in shock and mourning. The governor should not rush to rebuild the community without first giving people time to heal, especially without including the community itself in the planning.

Put the community first in any planning process for rebuilding Lāhainā. The governor should work with the community to develop a plan that meets the needs of the people. Fast–tracked development cannot come at the cost of community control.

Amend the Emergency Proclamation to ensure that Chapter 92 Sunshine Law remains in full force. This law guarantees the public's right to know about government decision–making and the discussions and information used in that process. The governor should ensure that all decisions about the rebuilding of Lāhainā are made in the open and with full participation of the Lāhainā community.

"Our diverse Lāhainā community stands together, strong and resilient," said Keʻeaumoku Kapu, a spokesperson for Nā ʻOhana o Lele. "But we need time to heal and to come together. We also need to be involved in the planning process for rebuilding our community. We ask that the governor meet our demands and work with us to create a better future for Lāhainā. Come talk to us."

Nā ʻOhana o Lele is a coalition of community members who have been taking action on many fronts to care for their beloved ʻohana, friends, and community. The coalition includes residents who have the support of a wide array of individuals, organizations, and institutions.

"Maluhia Collective, a small, family–owned boutique in Maui, and other local businesses currently unaffected by the fires are organizing supply drop–offs for first responders from the Maui Fire Department, "

"The business, located in Wailuku, Hawaii, about 22 miles from Lahaina, is collecting snacks, premade food and drinks that are compiled and sent over to fire stations. Yamashita said most people are in "fight or flight mode. I think most of us are in shock because some of the footage from friends and family in the severely affected areas don't even seem real."

The Maui fires are causing some of the worst damages and destruction we've seen in recent history on the Valley Isle.

Homes have been destroyed and businesses are being burnt to the ground, from Lahaina to Upcountry. Hundreds have had to evacuate, and many are sheltering with not much more than the clothes on their backs. And so now, more than ever, we have to show our aloha by supporting these communities and affected individuals in any way we can.

READ MORE: Maui Fires: What You Need To Know

Since non-essential travel to Maui is being discouraged right now in order to prioritize resources for residents, we've compiled a handful of community funds and nonprofits you can contribute to right now. In such dire times, truly anything can help and make a difference for those affected by the fires, and we will continue to add more donation centers to this article as the situation continues to evolve.

The Salvation Army
Providing food and resources to those in need, The Salvation Army is accepting Maui donations on its Hawai'i site, hawaii.salvationarmy.org.

Maui Mutual Aid Fund
A local effort, the Maui Mutual Aid Fund is run by volunteers looking to get funds and support to vulnerable residents, such as kūpuna (elderly), those with physical disabilities, renters and individuals without insurance. Donations can be sent to bit.ly/mauimutualaide.

If you are a kamaʻāina in need, reach out to Maui Mutual Aid Fund at (650) 279–1662.

Maui United Way
Maui United Way has set up a Maui fire relief fund that will go directly to support Maui fire victims. Donate here.

Maui Strong Fund
Created by the Hawaiʻi Community Foundation to provide resources for disaster preparedness, response and recovery, the Maui Strong Fund is currently being used to help aid communities affected by the Maui Wildfires. You can donate online at its website, hawaiicommunityfoundation.org/maui–strong, or you can send a check to Hawaiʻi Community Foundation, 827 Fort Street Mall, Honolulu, HI, 96813. Make checks payable “Hawaiʻi Community Foundation”.

Maui Humane Society
Unfortunately, it’s not just people affected by the fires, but pets too. The Maui Humane Society is asking for emergency foster homes for its animals to help make space for new displaced pets. Pet supplies, like wet and dry food, litter and pop–up kennels are also in need, and you can always donate funds on its website, mauihumanesociety.org.

Hawaiʻi Red Cross
A leader in disaster relief, the Hawaiʻi Red Cross is providing assistance and shelter to Maui fire victims and you can support them here.

Maui Food Bank
The Maui Food Bank is accepting both physical drop–off donations at various locations across Maui as well as online monetary donations on its website mauifoodbank.org/donate.

War Memorial Complex
Maui County has opened the Maui War Memorial Complex (700 Halia Nakoa St, Wailuku) as a donation drop–off center, and it will be open from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. accepting non–perishable food, bottled water, hygiene items and blankets.

Support Maui – Help & Resources
Maui Mutual Aid Resources & Guide
Written by: Nanea Lo, HAPA Administrative & Programs Coordinator

HAPA ʻOhana x Community our Maui ʻOhana need our help! As all of you have become aware Maui was set ablaze by wildfires — worsened by decades of global fossil fuel burning and local political land use decisions on Maui. In case you haven’t seen the news much of Maui caught fire in the beginning of this week and burned overnight, taking all of historic Lāhainā town, which is the original capital and seat of the Hawaiian Kingdom. History and homes and so many parts of our culture forever burned to the ground.

Our focus right now is getting relief to the people who need it most, while we strategize to rebuild for the long haul.

Follow us on Instagram, Facebook, and Twitter to spread the word & updates.

Fair & Sustainable Food Systems
HAPA was born out of a commitment to food systems justice, recognizing that food systems are fundamental to the public good and resilience. In Hawaiʻi, the legacy of industrial agriculture spans back to the sugar and pineapple plantations, and now the region is known as "ground zero" for the agrochemical industry.

HAPAʻs long–term vision for Fair & Sustainable Food Systems is to decrease pesticide use and extractive/toxic industrial–agricultural practices across Hawaiʻi and to grow our local food security through regenerative/ʻōiwi food systems.

Pesticide–intensive industrial agriculture depletes the land of its health and vitality. HAPA works to transition from industrial systems toward regenerative and just food systems that center on Kanaka Maoli traditional practices and connection to place, mālama ʻāina. Creating local, regenerative food systems not only increases food security but also mitigates climate catastrophe through carbon capture and reducing our dependence on imported food.

* Extractive, industrial–agricultural practices are replaced with regenerative and equitable local food production.
* Communities, farmworkers, local ecosystems, etc., are protected from pesticide drift.
* Hawaiʻi increases local food security from small–scale, regenerative local food producers.
* Increased restoration of traditional and customary food systems— and the ecosystems they depend on— is led by the communities connected to place.
* Public agricultural lands and waters are reclaimed from corporate capture for the public good – farmers engaged in sustainable local food production have access to those lands and waters.

Policy & Advocacy
HAPA engages in various activities to foster a healthy, sustainable, and equitable food system. This includes creating educational resources, engaging with the community, organizing grassroots initiatives, and advocating for policy interventions at the county and state levels. We aim to support a vibrant agricultural economy in Hawaiʻi, free from harmful toxins. To achieve this, HAPA takes a proactive role by spearheading and endorsing a range of comprehensive policies during the state legislative session

CAMPAIGN
Pesticides, Public Health, & The Right to Know
Public Health informing reports on Restricted Use Pesticides came out in 2019, 2020, and 2021; HAPA is engaging communities exposed to the heaviest pesticide use to alert them to the potential ramifications to their health and environment.
This campaign is the continuation of our work around Act 45. In 2019 the first year of state–mandated Restricted–Use Pesticides reports came out. In partnership with the Center for Food Safetyʻs science team, HAPA undertook to convert all the reports into a unified and comprehensive comparison. HAPA enlisted Center for Food Safety and GIS consultants to help us overlay this pesticide use in pounds over TMK parcels. This way, communities, residents, and workers can access the data and draw meaningful insights into what this exposure could mean for their health, families, waterways, and environment. We are now engaging with the communities most impacted by exposures: West Kauaʻi & Central Oʻahu. To learn more about this work, you can visit our campaign page.

CAMPAIGN
ʻAi Pono Kauaʻi Challenge
The challenge is a celebratory initiative that brings residents together to learn about their local food system. This project the importance of regional efforts and responding to market demand in creating successful solutions for our food system. By offering support to local food producers, our communities work towards a just and sustainable agricultural economy.
In November 2020, HAPA hosted the inaugural ʻAi Pono Kaua'i Challenge to eat locally for 7 days on Kauai with support from the County (via a re–grant from Mālama Kauaʻi) to support our local food producers during a time when our tourism economy was largely shut down due to the pandemic. Residents participating in the challenge were encouraged to eat foods that were raised, grown, and processed locally.

Stamp cards with various local food tasks are filled and turned in for prizes. Participants share great solutions for eating locally while maintaining a budget. Restaurants partnered with HAPA to feature locally sourced ingredients and dishes. We started with 30 partners (food producers, farmers, restaurants, etc.) and have now grown to 68 partners.

Service Temporary

WCK's response in Hawai'i is continuing to evolve with the situation—and by working with chefs and residents from impacted communities, we will keep adjusting our efforts to meet the changing needs. After setting up centralized distribution points in the first few days, we will now focus more resources on finding pockets of need wherever they exist and meeting people where they are to best support them as they begin to heal and build back.

Services offered: Food * (ANY/ALL Types); Meals * (ANY/ALL Types)
