4/14/2011 From Post on HEAS from Dr. Wilson quoting article
"Since the rainy season began in the last 2 weeks, we've seen 1000 cases," said David Walton, who runs the center. While many of the new cases are less severe than the deadly wave that first hit the country last fall [2010], Walton said the uptick could be an indicator of things to come. "I worry that given what I've seen, we could be overwhelmed again at the cholera centers," he said.
