On August 29, 2005, Hurricane Katrina made landfall as a Category 5 hurricane, the sixth–strongest storm ever recorded in the Atlantic basin. The official death toll was more than 1,700, with more than 1 million people displaced. The hurricane caused significant damage to the coastal regions of Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama and is considered the most destructive and costliest natural disaster in the history of the United States.

Business Roundtable immediately activated Partnership for Disaster Response, urging member companies to contribute to the relief effort and facilitating communications about critical on–the–ground needs. The Partnership was in daily contact with the American Red Cross, Salvation Army, Department of Homeland Security, Department of Commerce, Department of Labor and other organizations, and helped match their needs with member companies? resources.

Note: Perspective of smaller relief sites in "business model" item below. While this group's "solution" seems great in that it appears to get more relief supplies into the the delivery system, it does not appear to address the issues of getting supplies to the large number of smaller, unaffiliated relief sites. See more detailed notes in the "business model" item below.
